PORTLAND, June 13.—The scarcity of fish from the Columbia continues, with no indication that the expected run has started.

The stage of water is not such as to attract the fish from outside, but as the big run did not take place until July last year, there is plenty of time yet for a repetition of the abundance that swamped canners then. This year, however, canners are better prepared to take care of a big supply than they were then, and there is little prospect of so many fish being thrown away, even if the next run is heavier than anticipated.

Locally there is a marked absence of chinooks in the markets and in hands of dealers. The situation is somewhat relieved by shipments from the Sacramento. The price for fresh salmon remains firm at 9c. Summer steelheads have been practically caught out and have not figured in quotations for some time.

To indicate the scarcity of fish in the Upper Columbia, the following extract from a letter received by a dealer from J. H. Taffe, at Celilo, will be read with interest:

"In the 23 years I have spent at Celilo, I never experienced anything like this in the line of fishing.

"There is scarcely any fish anywhere in this river that I can hear of. No one is doing anything up this way."
